CONTRIBUTORS

JAN BARAN is counsel to Americans for Change and is an attorney with the Washington office of Baker & Hostetler. He served as Executive Assistant to the Chairman of the Federal Election Commission and as counsel to the National Republican Congressional Committee. He lectures regularly at the Practicing Law Institute's annual seminar on "The Corporation in Politics."

CAROL MAST BEACH is an alumna of the New York University School of Law. She researched the tax aspects of political activity for Thomas Schwarz's ABA election law study and also served as a research assistant to the National Unity Campaign for John Anderson focusing on current election laws that regulate contributions of original art works by well-known artists.

PAUL CHEVIGNY is an Associate Professor of Law at New York University. Before coming to NYU he was a staff attorney for the New York Civil Liberties Union. He has authored several books, including Police Power, Cops and Rebels, and Criminal Mischief: A Novel.

RONALD D. EASTMAN is general counsel to the Democratic National Committee and a partner in the Washington office of Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft. He served as special counsel to President Carter's 1976 prenomination campaign committee and to the Carter-Mondale general election committee.

GEORGE FRAMPTON, JR. coordinated all of the ballot access litigation brought on behalf of John Anderson's independent presidential campaign. He is currently a partner in the Washington law firm of Rogovin, Sterne & Huge, and served as Assistant Special Prosecutor on the Watergate Special Prosecution Force. Mr. Frampton also served as Deputy Director of the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission's Special Inquiry Group, which prepared a report on the Three Mile Island accident. Together with Richard Ben-Veniste he authored Stonewall: The Real Story of the Watergate Prosecution.

HARRIET A. HENTGES is Executive Director of the League of Women Voters Education Fund. She worked as an economist for the Policy Planning Staff of the State Department. Before joining the State Department in 1977, she served as Special Assistant to the Deputy Special Trade Representative in the White House Office of the Special Representative for Trade Negotiations.

CHRIS HOCKER is the publisher of Inquiry magazine. He was the national coordinator of the 1980 presidential campaign of libertarian Ed Clark.

RANDY HUWA is currently a registered lobbyist for Common Cause specializing in campaign finance and environmental legislation. He was formerly Executive Director of New Jersey Common Cause and has worked for the Eagleton Institute of Politics at Rutgers University.

DAVID M. IFSHIN is a Visiting Lecturer of Law at Yale Law School and an attorney with the Washington law firm of Steptoe & Johnson. He is co-chairman of the American Bar Association's Committee on Elections of the Administrative Law Section.

XANDRA KAYDEN is an assistant professor of political science at Brandeis University and a member of the Campaign Finance Study Group at the Institute of Politics at Harvard University. She chaired the Institute's Faculty Study Group on Party Structure and the Policy Committee of the State Board of Massachusetts Americans for Democratic Action. She has written numerous reports on the relationship between campaign finance laws and party structure; the most recent have been published by the American Enterprise Institute and the House Administration Committee.

SHERI B. LANOFF is currently Political Affairs Specialist for the National Education Association. She was formerly the Director of Government/ Voters Service of the League of Women Voters Education Fund.

STEWART MOTT was a named plaintiff in the controversial Buckley v. Valeo decision. Perhaps he is best described as a philanthropist and political activist. He is chairman of the Fund for Peace and Population Action Council, and he founded the Fund for a Constitutional Government. He also serves on the boards of directors of the National Committee for an Effective Congress, the Center for Study of Democratic Institutions, the Population Crisis Committee, the Committee for Open Politics, the Citizens Research Foundation, Americans for Democratic Action, and the Campaign for Peace.

NORMAN REDLICH is Dean of the New York University School of Law. He is currently Chairman of the Committee on Admissions and Grievances of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and a Member of the Executive Committee of the Bar Association of New York. He is the author of Professional Responsibility: A Problem Approach.

THOMAS J. SCHWARZ authored a major study for the American Bar Association entitled Public Financing of Elections: A Constitutional Division of the Wealth. He is a partner with the New York law firm of Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom. In addition, he is a columnist on election law for the Legal Times of Washington and an advisor to the American Bar Association Committee on Election Law Reform.

JOSEPH C. SPERO was a student at Columbia Law School at the time of the Colloquium and is currently a law clerk with the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

CHARLES STEELE is currently General Counsel to the Federal Election Commission. He previously served as Associate General Counsel to the FEC's Office of Enforcement and Litigation and as a staff attorney with the Appellate Court Branch of the National Labor Relations Board.

MORRIS K. UDALL is a United States Congressman from Arizona. He was first elected to Congress in 1961, and is currently Chairman of the House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs and of the Subcommittee on Energy and the Environment. Congressman Udall was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the presidency in 1976, and delivered the keynote address at the 1980 Democratic National Convention. He has been an active legislator in a wide variety of areas, and has consistently supported proposals for public financing of congressional elections.

STEVEN UHLFELDER is currently the Chairman of the American Bar Association's Special Committee on Election Law and Voter Participation and a partner with the Tallahassee law firm of Ausley, McMullen, McGehee, Carothers & Proctor. He served as special counsel to former Florida Governer Reubin Askew and as the executive director of the Florida Constitution Revision Commission.

FRED WERTHEIMER is the President of Common Cause. He has been the organization's chief lobbyist on campaign finance reform and authored the Common Cause Manual on Money and Politics. Before joining Common Cause, Mr. Wertheimer served as legislative counsel to Congressman Silvio Conte, counsel to the House Small Business Committee, and as an attorney with the Securities and Exchange Commission.