GENERAL PROVISIONS

The Law School's Symposium Funding Committee allocates a limited annual budget to student groups seeking to hold symposia on law-related topics. The following provisions apply to all applicants for funding from the Committee:

- 1) All student groups seeking to hold symposia in the following academic year must apply for funding in the late winter of the preceding year. Student groups also should consider applying for funding for symposia more than a year away. Thus student groups interested in holding symposia in 2013-14 must apply for funding by March 1, 2013.
- 2) Before submitting an application for funding, representatives of a student group must:
  - a. obtain the input of a faculty member who teaches in the area of the event and obtain the signature of that advisor approving your final application, (this faculty member will be your symposium advisor for the purposes of this application) and
  - b. meet with Paul O'Grady and David Mora from the Office of Student Affairs.
- 3) Keep the following parameters in mind in preparing your application for funding:
  - a. The Committee seeks to fund symposia that will introduce new issues, perspectives, and people to the legal world and make contributions to important societal and academic debates.
  - b. Timeliness. The strongest proposals will show how the topic relates to current developments in law and society and will select participants that are on the cutting edge of the issues today.
  - c. Identify the questions. In your application, include the motivating question or questions for each part of your event. If your application does not contain sentences that end in question marks that describe the specific key questions your event will tackle, it will not be a successful application.
  - d. Balance. The Committee wants to fund programs that offer a balanced inquiry into the issues at stake. Once you have written down the key questions for each part of your program, identify competing perspectives and potential answers to each of these questions. Explain the nature of these debates and perspectives in your application. Then make sure that each potential answer and perspective is represented in the program. In your description of each proposed speaker, explain to the committee what perspective the speaker will represent.
  - e. Products. Symposia should aim to generate one or more products. Products could include: a series of papers to be published in a law journal, reports, papers posted on the internet, greater public awareness of an issue, and networking opportunities. The Committee generally favors some sort of publication of the ideas emanating from a symposium.
  - f. Format. Symposia can have different formats. For example, symposia may be one-day, two-day or half-day events. They also could be small events with only a few speakers not intended to draw large audiences, or large events intended to draw many attendees. If a single panel of speakers will achieve your group's goals, then propose that instead of a daylong symposium.

- g. Implementers. In your application you must identify the students who will be in charge of implementing the symposium the following year. This may require that you identify the Symposium Editor for your group prior to the March 1 application deadline.
  - h. Do not commit your group or the Law School to any project until the Committee has funded your proposal, or secure any speakers until the Committee or its chair have approved them.
  - i. Consider joint projects with NYU Law faculty. Faculty will sometimes have conferences that they would like to organize with student organizations such as journals. In other cases, faculty may be intrigued by projects that student groups initiate.
  - j. Consider joint projects with other Law School student groups. For example, journals and non-journal student groups should consider presenting joint applications for funding. Such joint ventures could help non-journal groups publish papers from their symposia and allow journals to help organize symposia with real-world resonance.
  - k. The Committee will consider each proposal individually in allocating funding. The Committee will not begin with the assumption that every proposal is equally entitled to "x" amount.
- 4) If your application is approved for funding, you will be required to work regularly with Paul O'Grady and David Mora in organizing your event. You also must seek approval for significant changes to the substance of your event from your faculty advisor and the Symposia Committee.
- 5) After applications are due, and before deciding which proposal(s) to fund, several committee members will meet with representatives of student groups that have submitted applications for funding. These meetings will allow student groups to make the case for their proposals and give Committee members an opportunity to raise questions and address their concerns. Keep in mind that Committee members also may ask faculty members, including faculty advisors, for their views of applications for funding.

A journal can still retain the position of Symposium Editor even if the journal is denied funding for a symposium in a given year, provided the journal receives funding for a symposium at least once every two years. A Symposium Editor can receive credit even if the journal is denied funding for a proposal in a given year, provided the Editor is involved in designing, planning, implementing, editing and publishing, or is otherwise occupied in equivalent journal organizational work. Keep in mind that Symposium Editors can organize "virtual" symposia if journals are denied funding by the Committee.

APPLICATION INSTRUCTIONS

Please provide all the following information on separate, typewritten sheets, except for the budget information. Budget information must be typed in the specific form provided below.

A. Applicant Information

List your organization's name, address, phone number, and fax number.

List the name, phone number, and email address, for each student coordinator in charge of preparing the application.

List the name, phone number, and email address for each student coordinator who will be in charge of organizing the symposium next academic year.

Please note that student coordinators assume responsibility for all requirements of the Symposium Funding Committee, including financial reporting.

B. Faculty Advisor Approval

Your faculty advisor(s) must review the final version of your application that you submit to the Committee and indicate his or her approval of the application. Include the following text at the beginning of your application and give the final application to your advisor(s) to sign.

“Faculty Advisor Approval. Students are required to seek substantive input from a faculty advisor on their proposed program. All applications must be approved by their faculty advisor(s).

Faculty advisors, please sign below to indicate that you have reviewed the students' application and approve it.

Name of faculty advisor: [TYPED NAME]

Signature of faculty advisor: _____ Date: _____”

C. Summary of Proposed Symposium

- 1) List the following for your proposed symposium: (a) symposium title; (b) proposed date(s) (e.g. Fall 2013 or Spring 2014) and location/room(s); (c) faculty advisor; (d) expected number of participants (including speakers and audience); and (e) total budget requested.
- 2) Check with your faculty advisor and with other relevant faculty to make sure that no other event(s) on the same or a similar topic will take place on campus during the same academic year. List the sources with whom you checked. (Attached find Appendix A, a listing of symposia presented in the last few years.)

D. Subject of Symposium

Please address the following:

- 1) The topic of your symposium, describing specifically the issues you expect will be discussed;
- 2) The reason(s) why it is timely and important to hold a symposium on the topic you are proposing. For example, has there been a recent event that has altered the landscape for considering the topic? Are there differing views in the legal community about the topic? Etc.;

- 3) The extent to which your topic has been discussed in existing legal scholarship and at events that have occurred or will shortly occur at NYU and other law schools;
- 4) The extent to which you anticipate that your event will contribute to legal scholarship or to the development and practice of law.
- 5) Include several relevant examples of scholarly literature that would apply to the proposed symposium.

E. Format and Agenda For Symposium

Please provide:

- 1) A schedule of the symposium's events that outlines your proposed format;
- 2) For each speaker you propose to invite, the name, title, and organizational affiliation/credentials of the speaker and the viewpoints each will bring to the topic;
- 3) The numbers and origins of your anticipated audience.

F. Anticipated Products From Symposium

Please address the following:

- 1) Describe the products you anticipate that your symposium will generate. These could include papers to be published in a law journal, reports, papers posted on the internet, greater public awareness of an issue, and networking opportunities. Remember the Committee's general preference for symposia that produce publications;
- 2) Explain how the products you anticipate will be generated by the symposium (e.g. an article will be published in the Fall 2014 volume of your journal).

G. Publicity Plans

- 1) Describe how your group proposes to publicize your event to achieve your audience target.

H. Group's Experience With Symposia

Please address the following:

- i. Indicate whether your group has organized a symposium in the past 3 years at NYU School of Law;
- ii. If your group has organized one or more symposium in the past 3 years, indicate:
  1. the topic of that symposium (or those symposia)
  2. when it (or they) took place
  3. the number of people who participated as speakers and separately the number of people who attended
  4. the products that symposium (or those symposia) produced.

I. Projected Budget

The following worksheets will guide you in preparing a detailed plan of your event's budget. You are not limited to the list provided here. Feel free to attach pages or photocopy these sheets if your budget includes additional calculations. You must consult with Paul O'Grady and David Mora of Student Affairs before submitting this budget to the Committee.

Note that all events taking place on campus must be catered by Law School catering services. Please contact David Mora for assistance with catering (212-998-6295).

1. Transportation and Lodging

a. Tickets (airline, train, rental car, etc.) Please list destination and price for each traveler, and note that you must require all travelers to book enough in advance to get absolute lowest economy fares available. (Mileage reimbursement for using own car is $0.555/mile):

b. Local Transportation (please include estimate of total in taxi, airport bus, and subway fares for all travelers for all legs of their trips):

c. Lodging (use the Hampton Inn's $350.00/per person/per night figure below, but note that you may have to pay somewhat more or somewhat less for some/all of your travelers. You also may need to lodge some of them for more than one night. Estimate one night for East coast and two nights for West coast and Southwest travelers):
