There are five sections on the "Registration Home" page.

- 1) "Registration Status" shows any stops on your record that would prevent you from registering for courses. If you do have any stops, please clear them before continuing. This example shows no stops so you would be eligible to continue and register for courses.
- 2) "Active Registration" shows the current registration round. For the purpose of this training document, we are currently in a Bidding Round.
- 3) Current and allotted bid points for the next academic year. Bid points are used to indicate our preferences for courses and how strongly our preferences for those courses are. Please note that bid points for each semester can only be used to bid for courses in that semester. 1000/1000 indicates 1000 points are still available since we have not bid yet and 1000 points are allotted.
- 4) Credit load for the next academic year. For full-time students, they can take between 12 to 15 credits each semester.
- 5) Exam ID. At the beginning of each semester, it displays your Exam ID for that semester.

Bidding

This is a sample list of courses to be bid on. There are two bookmarked sections of Constitutional Law. For this example, you're planning to take Resisting Injustice to fulfill your writing requirement with alternates of Education Law and Research Seminar for Future Academics. Your alternates must also be able to satisfy the Substantial Writing requirement. For Spring, you want to take Copyright Law and one of the sections of Evidence.

ABRA: Auction Based Registration Algorithm

Here are all your bookmarked courses on the bidding page. Now note the Bids (P/A) Seats column on this page. It tells useful information so you can gauge how many points you should spend on a course. The “Bids” number tells you how many students for the previous bidding round bid for this course. The “P” tells me how many of those bids were Primary bids while the “A” tells me how many of those bids were Alternate bids. So it will always be P + A = Bids. The “Seats” tell us the number of seats available for that course. Don't be discouraged if it says “No seats available”, you will learn how to add yourself to a wait listing (weighted list) for that course during add/drop. For this example, there are zero bids since there was no previous bidding round and 99 seats available for all courses. When you bid in a real bidding round, you will be able to see how many bids were made on the class in the previous bidding round. It will show the previous round's number of bids and the current number of seats available.

Bidding for Courses

Your remaining bid points:

Fall 2011	1000 / 1000
Spring 2012	1000 / 1000

Below is your list of bookmarked course(s). Please enter a bid for the course(s) you would like to register.

NOTE: If you like to bid for a course that is not in the list below, please bookmark it first at Search Courses.

NOTE: If you wish to use your Substantial Writing Requirement priority, click the checkbox. When exercising your Substantial Writing Requirement priority, your primary AND alternate bid(s) must all be either a seminar or a colloquium that offers Substantial Writing. Please note that the Writing Requirement selection (checked or blank) must be the same for all alternate and primary bid selections.

ABRA: Auction Based Registration Algorithm

Writing Requirement selection (checked or blank) must be the same for all alternate and primary bid selections.

If you don't have a preference which section you get into for Constitutional Law, you can bid 0 points and save all your Fall semester points for Resisting Injustice. You can select your alternatives of Education Law and Research Seminar for Future Academics. You should not have a seminar or colloquium listed as your primary selection and then a course listed as your alternate selection. Also, you should not have a course listed as your primary selection and then a seminar or colloquium that you wish to satisfy substantial writing listed as an alternate. By bidding on seminars and colloquia together, you will ensure that your preference to satisfy the substantial writing requirement is correctly interpreted by ABRA. Check the Writing Requirement checkbox and bid 1000.

Note: Checking the substantial writing checkbox will not register you for the writing credit. The checkbox only tells ABRA to process the class(es) with priority for eligible students.

Substantial writing requirement bids must be grouped together. ABRA processes student substantial writing requirement bids first before processing non-substantial writing bids. If you can only take one more course and bid more for a non-writing course and less for a writing course, ABRA will place you in the writing course.

For Spring, you bid 400 for Copyright and 600 for both sections of Evidence hoping to get into one of them and click on Submit.

Substantial Writing Requirement Rules

1. Substantial Writing bids have priority and are processed first over regular bids. Substantial Writing is an upper-class (i.e. 2L and 3L) J.D. requirement. Substantial Writing is not required for students in the L.L.M. and J.S.D. programs. Please review your program requirements.
2. This priority can be exercised only once throughout the J.D. program. If you drop your designated Substantial Writing class, that you won using Substantial Writing priority, during the registration period (bidding or add/drop) you will not be able to use the Substantial Writing priority again.
3. If you must complete the Substantial Writing requirement, please select a seminar or colloquium in the primary bid area and any other seminars or colloquia that you wish to take should be selected as alternates to that first selection.
4. Remember to add the companion Writing Credit section during the add/drop round. You can bid zero points on that section.

Bidding Results and Course Schedule

It is now after the bidding round and you can log in to see the results. You can see if you won or lost any of your bids. On the home page, you will click on the Bidding Results link.

You will see greens and reds. Greens are the courses you won and Reds are the courses you lost bids on.

ABRA: Auction Based Registration Algorithm

You won Resisting Injustice Seminar and you paid 600 points for it because the highest losing bidder of this course tried to bid that much. 600 is the clearing price and you get back 400 fall points. Your alternates for Resisting Injustice Seminar are ignored because you won your primary bid.

- You lost your primary bid of Evidence but won your alternate bid for Evidence. Again, here you bid 600 but were not charged anything because there was more than enough seats for section 2 of Evidence. Your 600 spring points are returned.
- You won Copyright Law where you bid 400, but the clearing price is 399 so you pay 399 and are returned 1 point.
- You lost your first choice of Con Law but managed to get into section 2 of Con Law.
- There is an additional "Clearing Price" column that indicates what the last losing bid is for the course. This will aid you in adjusting your bids for the add/drop round.

As previously mentioned, your bookmarked courses have come over but you have not bid anything on them for the add/drop cycle. You can remove these courses or allocate points for add/drop at this time. You can allocate the same number of points that you previously allocated for the class during the bidding round or you can change the amount of points that you allocate. If you do not get into the class during the cycles of add/drop you are essentially placed on a waiting list. Your bid is carried over to each add/drop cycle.

During a particular cycle, you change your mind about taking Copyright Law. You decide to take Accounting for Lawyers instead.

Now go to the bidding page. Bidding You have 601 points left for Spring.

Your remaining bid points:
Fall 2011	400 / 1000
Spring 2012	601 / 1000

You'll notice that all courses that you didn't win or were ignored in the bidding round are here available for you to bid again in the add/drop round. Skip those and go directly to Accounting for Lawyers. You select Copyright Law as your conditional drop and spend all your points, 601. This combined with what you paid for Copyright Law of 399 means your total bid is 1000. You can always also select Evidence as your conditional drop #2. If you did, that means if you get into Accounting for Lawyers, you would drop both Copyright and Evidence.

Drop 1	Spring 2012 - LAW-LW.11552.001 Copyright Law

Then click on submit.

ABRA: Auction Based Registration Algorithm

Your conditional add/drop bid is submitted. And you see that it is $601 + 399 = 1000$ total bid.

Your remaining bid points:
