ADMISSION 2014 GRADUATE DIVISION APPLICATION INSTRUCTIONS

Master of Laws (LL.M.), Executive Master of Laws (E-LL.M.), Doctor of Juridical Science (J.S.D.), and Advanced Professional Certificates (A.P.C.)

Applying to the Graduate Division involves the completion of an online application form and the submission of required materials by a specific deadline. Some of the materials will be submitted via electronic attachment to the online application form, while others will be mailed. Certain materials are required from all applicants, while other materials are required for only some applicants. For these reasons, it is important that all applicants review this document carefully to ensure that they comply with all application procedures and submit all required materials in a timely manner. Applications are reviewed only after all required materials are received.

Eligibility and Standards of Admission

Eligibility

LL.M. and Executive LL.M. Programs

A candidate for the degree of Master of Laws (LL.M.) and Executive Master of Laws (E-LL.M.) within the Graduate Division at New York University School of Law must hold the first degree in law (J.D. or LL.B.) from a law school that is approved by the Section of Legal Education of the American Bar Association or a bachelor of laws degree from a non-U.S. law school approved by its foreign equivalent. Candidates who received their legal education from schools in Bologna-signatory countries must have academic credentials that permit them entry into legal practice; typically, three-year Bologna-compliant bachelor's degrees alone are not sufficient to meet this standard.

A prospective LL.M. or E-LL.M. applicant in his or her final year of study toward the first degree in law is eligible to apply only if he or she will complete all necessary requirements for the degree by the start date of the intended program (August for full-time programs).

J.S.D. Program

A J.S.D. candidate must meet the above LL.M. requirements and also hold an accredited advanced law degree (LL.M. or equivalent) from a U.S. or foreign law school. For doctoral candidates from Bologna-signatory countries, the advanced degree must be in addition to the academic credentials which permit entry into legal practice. Prospective students who hold a U.S. J.D. and who want to engage in the Law School's intellectual community in furtherance of a career in legal academia may wish to consider NYU Law's fellowship options instead of the J.S.D. program.

A prospective J.S.D. student who is currently enrolled in a graduate law degree program at an ABA-accredited law school in the United States (including NYU School of Law) or a non-U.S. law school approved by its foreign equivalent, and will have earned a graduate law degree prior to enrollment, may apply to the J.S.D. program for the Fall semester following the completion of the advanced degree.

A.P.C. in Taxation Program

A candidate for the Advanced Professional Certificate (A.P.C.) in Taxation must hold the first degree in law (J.D. or LL.B.) from a law school that is approved by the Section of Legal Education of the American Bar Association. A prospective applicant in his or her final year of study toward the first degree in law is eligible to apply only if he or she will complete all necessary requirements to receive the first degree in law by the start date of the certificate program. Applicants with a U.S. J.D. degree who already hold or are pursuing an LL.M. degree from an accredited law school may apply to the A.P.C. program. However, if admitted, they will still be required to complete prerequisites to gain access to more advanced classes, if applicable.

Standards of Admission

LL.M. and Executive LL.M. Programs

Admission to the Graduate Division for all LL.M. programs and the Executive LL.M. in Taxation is highly selective and is based primarily upon prior legal studies. Standards of admission are equal across all specializations and for both full-time and part-time study. Last year, the Law School received more than 2,700 full-time LL.M. applications for a class of about 425 students. Although there are no inflexible rules about class rankings or grade point averages, those admitted have excellent law school records and strong academic and/or professional recommendations. Evidence of significant professional accomplishment is also taken into consideration.

Admission to the LL.M. or E-LL.M. program does not guarantee or assure admission to the J.S.D. program.

J.S.D. Program

The J.S.D. is NYU School of Law's most advanced law degree. Only a very small number of students who demonstrate outstanding academic promise are admitted to J.S.D. candidacy. A student is admitted to the program only if he or she meets the application requirements and shows potential for completing a dissertation of publishable quality that will make a significant scholarly contribution to the field in which it is written. While the J.S.D. Committee exercises some preference for those who complete the LL.M. degree at NYU, it fully considers all applicants on the basis of their application materials regardless of provenance when finalizing admissions decisions. Typically, all NYU LL.M. graduates must have attained a cumulative grade point average of at least 3.50.

A.P.C. in Taxation Program

Academic admission criteria are comparable to those of the LL.M. and E-LL.M. in Taxation programs. Prospective students must demonstrate professional competence and career advancement.

Statement of Diversity

The Graduate Division of New York University School of Law is a community of remarkable diversity, enhancing the learning environment for all. Those who comprise our student body hail from around the world and bring with them a variety of experiences and viewpoints. Students are both the recipients and providers of the learning process, and the Law School in turn has a vital interest in what they bring to the task of educating each other.

To select the most highly-talented, motivated and intelligent people to take on this task from a pool of well-qualified applicants, the Committee on Graduate Admissions welcomes applications for the LL.M., J.S.D. and Advanced Professional Certificate programs from all eligible persons. We are additionally committed to making appropriate academic accommodation for admitted students with disabilities.

We very much encourage you to take the opportunity to highlight how you will contribute to our global community of scholars in your application to our institution.

New York University is committed to a policy of equal treatment and opportunity in every aspect of its relations with its faculty and staff members, without regard to race, gender and/or gender identity or expression, color, creed, religion, age, national origin, ethnicity, disability, unemployment status, veteran or military status, sex, sexual orientation, marital or parental status, citizenship status, or any other legally protected basis.

Inquiries concerning the application of the laws and regulations concerning equal employment and educational opportunity at New York University (including Title VI—equal opportunity regardless of race, color or national origin; Section 504—equal opportunity for the disabled; and Title IX—equal opportunity without regard to gender) may be referred to: Office of Equal Opportunity, New York University, 726 Broadway, 719-721, New York, New York 10003. Step 1: Register for the LSAC LL.M. Credential Assembly Service

All prospective students applying to the Graduate Division for any program are required to use the Law School Admission Council (LSAC) LL.M. Credential Assembly Service. To register, visit the LSAC website at www.lscac.org/lm. All applicants are strongly advised to register for the LL.M. Credential Assembly Service four to six weeks in advance of their first application deadline, and to supply required materials to LSAC as early as possible.

The LL.M. Credential Assembly Service simplifies the application process by centralizing the collection of application materials, and distributing them in an electronic report to all law schools to which an applicant applies. Applicants benefit from using this service by submitting the required application materials only once to LSAC. NYU's receipt of the required materials electronically from LSAC allows for quicker and more efficient processing for all applicants.

Applicants with domestic education credentials (those who hold, or are earning, a J.D. from a law school in the U.S. or Puerto Rico) must purchase the Document Assembly Service.

Applicants with foreign education credentials (those who earned their first law degree outside of the U.S.) must purchase both the Document Assembly Service and the International Transcript Authentication and Evaluation Service.

LSAC's Letter of Recommendation Service is also required for all applicants. It is important to follow the instructions regarding the registration of recommenders, and to ensure that the recommender attaches the correct letter to the corresponding required form prior to mailing the documents to LSAC.

Step 2: Submit the Application Form and Required Materials

Applicants must electronically submit their application by the appropriate deadline. It is strongly recommended (though not a requirement) that mailed application materials be received at LSAC two weeks before the application deadline. No guarantees can be made concerning applications submitted, or application materials received by LSAC, after the respective deadline; such applications may be returned unprocessed.

We suggest you print a copy of your online application for your records, and keep a file of all documents you submit with your application. We cannot return or give you copies of any part of your application, transcripts, translations, letters of recommendation, or supporting materials.

Application Form and Fee

Prospective students apply to all graduate degree and certificate programs using the NYU Online Application, accessible on the LSAC website. Applicants must complete all questions in each section of the application form, and electronically attach the required materials, before submitting the application. Applicants are not permitted to electronically attach additional pages in place of completing the requested information on the online application form. Do not mail duplicate copies of materials which are electronically submitted via the online application.

The $70 application fee is in addition to the service fees charged by LSAC, and is payable by credit card only on the LSAC website. Applicants who are unable to use a credit card to pay the application fee should contact the Office of Graduate Admissions at law.grad.moreinfo@nyu.edu. The application fee is non-refundable and will not be credited toward tuition if an applicant is offered admission. The Committee on Graduate Admissions does not waive application fees to the Graduate Division.

Transcripts

Applicants must comply with all LSAC requirements and policies regarding transcripts, and submit their official transcripts and translations with the LSAC form(s) to the LL.M. Credential Assembly Service. The law school report issued by LSAC includes copies all of transcripts and translations which the Committee on Graduate Admissions will use when evaluating applications.

Official transcripts from all law degrees, and translations of these documents from their original language to English, are required. Applicants who attended a school that releases information about class rankings should ensure that the school includes an official statement of class rank in the sealed envelope with the transcript. If class rank is unavailable, a school may instead include an official statement that attests it does not rank its students.

In addition to these documents, all applicants must calculate the grade point average and provide a class rank for their law degree in order to submit the online application. Applicants in their final year of study must also indicate which classes are currently in progress when submitting the online application. If there is additional information that applicants believe will be helpful to the Committee to evaluate their academic credentials, they should electronically attach an addendum to the online application.

English Language Proficiency Test

An English language proficiency test is required for all applicants whose first law degree program was not taught in English, or for applicants whose law degree program was taught in English but whose degree-granting institution is located in a country where English is not the primary language. Such applicants must submit an official score result from either the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) or the International English Language Testing System (IELTS).

Information regarding the TOEFL is available from www.toefl.org; applicants may only register for the internet-based TOEFL (iBT). Information regarding the IELTS is available at www.ielts.org; applicants may only register for the academic version. The Committee does not favor one exam over the other. Applicants are encouraged to take either test as early as possible and no later than November.

The Committee requires that applicants who take the TOEFL achieve a minimum total score of at least 100, a minimum score of 26 on the reading and listening subsections, and a minimum score of 22 on the writing and speaking subsections. For applicants who take the IELTS, the Committee requires a minimum overall band score of at least a 7, a minimum score of 7.5 on the reading and listening subsections, and a minimum score of 7 on the writing and speaking subsections. For both exams, J.S.D. applicants must present scores substantially higher than the minimum.

Applicants should request that the Educational Testing Service issue an official score report of their results from the TOEFL iBT directly to LSAC (institution code: 8395). For IELTS test-takers, contact the test center directly and request that your test scores be sent to LSAC electronically. An institutional code is not required. LSAC only accepts scores submitted electronically, and all IELTS test centers worldwide are able to send scores electronically to LSAC.

Under no circumstances may an applicant submit a score report directly to LSAC or to NYU Law; only official reports issued by the testing agencies are acceptable. Please do not send photocopies or examinee copies to NYU; they are not permitted, and will not expedite the review of your application.

Applicants whose primary language is not English must have strong English language proficiency in order to participate productively and successfully in all aspects of the graduate program. Simply meeting the minimum TOEFL or IELTS standards is not necessarily sufficient and will not ensure academic success. In addition to the English language exam, interviews for English proficiency may be required; any such interviews would be conducted in the applicant's home country.

Applicants whose first law degree program was not taught in English, but who have completed an advanced degree taught in English in a country where English is the primary language are not required to take the TOEFL or the IELTS. These applicants must submit an official transcript to LSAC showing the advanced graded academic coursework and the conferral of the degree. Applicants who are currently enrolled in such an advanced degree program, but who have not been conferred the degree, must submit an official TOEFL or IELTS score.

Recommendations

All applicants are required to use the LSAC Letter of Recommendation Service. Applicants must comply with LSAC requirements and policies regarding letters of recommendation, and submit the letters with the LSAC forms to the LL.M. Credential Assembly Service. It is important that you follow the instructions carefully when registering recommenders with LSAC.

One academic letter of recommendation is required for application to the full-time and part-time LL.M. programs. Applicants may submit additional academic or professional letter(s) if they wish to do so.

J.S.D. applicants are required to submit two letters of recommendation from law school faculty members who are familiar with the candidate's academic work and can attest to the candidate's ability to complete a doctoral dissertation that will make a significant scholarly contribution.

Applicants to the part-time LL.M. in Taxation, the E-LL.M., or A.P.C. in Taxation programs, who additionally received their first degree in law from a U.S. or Puerto Rican law school, may submit a letter of recommendation, but are not required to do so.

Personal Statement and Résumé

All applicants must electronically attach to the online application a brief personal statement of no more than 500 words. Applicants may describe their professional interests and goals, or they may use the statement to describe aspects of themselves and/or their work that are not apparent from their other application materials. Applicants should include their reasons and qualifications for applying for a particular program or specialization, and applicants to the Legal Theory program are encouraged to address their main field(s) of interest within legal theory. Applicants to the part-time LL.M. in Taxation, the E-LL.M., or the A.P.C. in Taxation, who additionally received their first degree in law from a U.S. or Puerto Rican law school may submit a personal statement, but are not required to do so.

All applicants must also electronically attach a résumé or curriculum vitae to their application. This document may be one to two pages in length, and should account for all education and work experience, as well as any period of more than three months not spent in school or employed. Publications, presentations, or other career-related information may also be indicated.

Hauser Global Scholarship

If an applicant to the full-time LL.M. program is applying for the Hauser Global Scholarship a separate essay is required. Such candidates must electronically attach to their NYU Online Application an essay of 500 to 750 words that briefly describes a current legal dilemma, controversy, or issue facing a country, a region, or the world, and suggests a strategy to address the problem. This essay is in addition to the personal statement.

Writing Samples

Due to the large number of applications that we receive each year, the Committee on Graduate Admissions is not able to read or consider writing samples, articles, or research papers submitted with applications. Instead, publications, academic presentations and the like may be noted on an applicant's résumé or curriculum vitae for consideration by the Committee.

J.S.D. Proposal of Study

All J.S.D. applicants are required to electronically attach to their online application a completed proposal of study for the doctoral program of no more than 10,000 words in length, including the relevant bibliography. Proposals of study must be submitted via electronic attachment to the online application by the January 31 application deadline. Late submission of a proposal of study is not permitted. The Committee on J.S.D. Admissions understands that it is difficult to make an argument for a problem one has not yet researched at length, but applicants should give thought to the following when preparing the proposal:

- Research objectives—the inquiry to be pursued.
- A review of the current literature in the field.
- Methodological strategies planned to be utilized.
- The contribution to the field of inquiry, or how the research will be valuable for others.
- Difficulties that might be encountered during research.
- Full-time faculty at NYU, including full-time adjunct professors, with whom the applicant wishes to work (biographies are available on the Law School website).

The proposal should have sufficient specificity to make possible an evaluation by a member of our faculty familiar with the proposed field. While applicants should identify in their proposal of study possible dissertation advisors after reviewing the faculty biographies online, it is not necessary to seek approval from faculty members in advance of application. Students admitted into the program will be notified of their designated advisor. It is expected that admitted students will establish contact with the dissertation advisor before enrolling in the J.S.D. program.

Throughout the degree program, the advisor will provide consultation on courses and research, and supervise the student's progress in writing the dissertation.

Reapplication

Applicants who previously applied to any program at NYU School of Law must submit a new application and fee, and a new set of all required application materials. Such applicants must follow all policies and procedures as first-time applicants.

Step 3: Application Review and Decision Notification

Applications for all degree and certificate programs are not reviewed until all required materials and the application fee have been received. Applicants currently enrolled in non-U.S. law schools that use a final examination result (such as a final state examination) or a final degree classification as a measure of academic performance may not receive a decision until those results are received by the Committee on Graduate Admissions.

After filing an application and submitting materials, applicants are encouraged to check the status of their application periodically by visiting the Applicant Online Status Check, available from the Graduate Admissions website.

In an effort to communicate in a timely fashion with applicants, all decisions regarding application to the Graduate Division will be released electronically. Applicants may expect an email notification from law.grad.moreinfo@nyu.edu when their decisions have been released. An official offer of admission to any degree or certificate program of the Graduate Division of NYU School of Law is a mailed letter sent to the address indicated on the application. Decisions other than admission will only be released electronically and will not be mailed.

Full-time LL.M. Program

Full-time programs begin in August. Decisions regarding the full-time LL.M. program will be communicated in March to applicants with foreign education credentials who supply to LSAC all materials necessary to complete their files by the December 16 deadline. Those foreign applicants who do not supply materials to LSAC to complete their application by December 16 will receive decisions as they are made following completion of their file. All decisions for foreign applicants to the LL.M. program in New York City will be communicated by June.

Applicants with domestic education credentials who complete their application by the appropriate deadline (see page 4) will receive decisions regarding the full-time LL.M. program in New York City as they are made. Note that, while applications are sent to the Committee on Graduate Admissions in the order in which they are completed, decisions are not necessarily made in the order in which applications are first reviewed. All domestic applicants to full-time programs will receive a decision no later than late June.

Decisions regarding all scholarships for the full-time Taxation program are released on a rolling basis, and follow notification of admission to the LL.M. degree. For all other master's programs, admitted students selected to receive one of our merit-based scholarships will be notified at the time of admission. All LL.M. scholarship decisions are final and non-negotiable.

J.S.D. Program

J.S.D. applicants who supply all materials required to complete their files by the January 31 deadline will learn whether they are finalists no later than mid-April. All finalists must make themselves available for an interview shortly after being contacted by the Office of Graduate Admissions. Interviews may be conducted at the Law School, via videoconference, or by telephone; the mode chosen will depend on the applicant's circumstances and the needs of the Law School. After the interview, finalists may expect a decision in late April.

Applicants who are not invited for an interview will be notified by mid-April.

Part-time LL.M., E-LL.M. and A.P.C. in Taxation Programs

Decisions for enrollment for Spring and Fall semester entry will be made as soon as possible following completion of an applicant's file and typically no later than about 2 weeks before the start of each semester.

Step 4: Accepting an Offer of Admission

In order to accept an offer of admission, students must not have an enrollment or deferral commitment to attend another institution, will be required to withdraw from any other offers of admission they have at that point, and must attest they will not apply to another institution or request to be reinstated at any institution from which they have withdrawn. The deadline to accept an offer will be provided in the admission offer.

Full-time LL.M. Programs

Students admitted to the full-time LL.M. programs must submit a non-refundable $500 tuition deposit to reserve their seat in the class.

Admitted students who are granted scholarships will be given a short interval to respond to our scholarship offer. The Committee therefore encourages all applicants to consider whether NYU is their school of choice, and to investigate the means of financing costs which may not be covered by scholarships, so that they can decide whether to accept a scholarship offer shortly after being notified of the award.

J.S.D. Program

No tuition deposit is required to reserve a seat in the incoming doctoral class. Further instructions will be provided with the offer of admission.

Part-time LL.M., E-LL.M., and A.P.C. in Taxation Programs

The admission packet for admitted students will include instructions on how to reserve a seat in the class. No tuition deposit is required to reserve a seat in the incoming part-time class.

Scholarships and Financing Your Degree

Graduate legal education is a significant investment of students' time and money, and should be approached with a full understanding of both the benefits and costs. While the Law School has several selective scholarship programs, in most cases, financing a graduate education rests primarily with the student. Therefore, all applicants are strongly encouraged to investigate all available financing options.

NYU Law offers a number of highly competitive scholarships to full-time LL.M. students, which are described below. Admission and scholarship decisions are made based on merit without regard to a student's financial need. All scholarship decisions are final and non-negotiable.

All students admitted to the J.S.D. program receive full funding for three years, subject to satisfactory progress in the program.

The Law School's Office of Student Financial Services has assembled online information about various external financial aid opportunities. This information is not exhaustive and your own research may be very beneficial. All applicants are advised to confirm all application deadlines for external aid directly with the granting organization. International students should also explore financing options in their home countries.

Cost of Attendance

Each year, the Office of Student Financial Services develops the student expense budget to estimate a student's annual projected educational expenses—including tuition, fees, living expenses, books, and health insurance—keeping in mind the simple lifestyle of a graduate student. Note that this is an estimated budget; an individual's actual costs during the academic year may vary depending on his or her choices regarding discretionary expenses.

Prospective students are advised to plan for additional financial resources beyond those which comprise the student expense budget. For example, all foreign-trained lawyers are required to attend two introductory summer courses which run concurrently and take place before the formal start of the academic year. While no additional tuition is charged for these courses, there are additional living and health insurance costs which are associated with arriving early, and which are not a part of the student expense budget. Similarly, any master's student who plans to stay after graduation in order to take the New York bar exam will need to plan for the additional costs associated with preparing for the exam and remaining in New York for the period May through late July/early August.

Students with Families

Students who expect to bring spouses and/or children to New York for the academic year should consider planning appropriately. Admitted international students receive advice from the Office of Global Services about applying for visas for their dependents, including the additional financing the U.S. government requires. Students may apply for the limited family housing available in the Law School's residences, but should also be prepared to seek accommodation on the private market in the case that the demand for family housing exceeds supply. Those students covered by NYU's health insurance plans have the option of including qualifying family members in the coverage for an additional cost. And, NYU Law's graduate students are eligible to apply for the Childcare Subsidy from the University's Student Resource Center to assist in meeting the costs of childcare.

Hauser and Vanderbilt Scholarships, and Dean's Graduate Awards

With the exception of the Hauser Scholarship, all admitted LL.M. students are automatically considered for the scholarships for which they are eligible on the basis of their admissions application; no additional application materials are required. Prospective students who apply for the Hauser Scholarship must indicate their interest in being considered on the application form and electronically attach to their online application an additional required essay.

Admitted students selected to receive one of these merit-based awards will be notified at the time of admission. All recipients will be recognized in many ways; special workshops, lunches, and other social activities, as well as personalized attention from the faculty are all part of the award.

Hauser Global Scholars Program

The Hauser Global Scholarship is the most prestigious honor awarded to exceptional LL.M. students. These merit scholarships provide full tuition and reasonable living expenses, such as rent, the cost of textbooks and other study materials.

The Hauser Global Scholars reflect the breadth, diversity and achievement of NYU School of Law's graduate student body. Scholars are chosen on the basis of their intellectual and leadership ability and their capacity to participate productively in a global community of scholars and practitioners.

Hauser Global Scholar candidates must be graduates of a law school outside of the United States.

In addition to completing the application for admission to the full-time LL.M. program (including a personal statement), candidates must electronically attach to their online application an essay of 500 to 750 words that briefly describes a current legal dilemma, controversy, or issue facing a country, a region, or the world, and suggests a strategy to address the problem.

Candidates who are not awarded Hauser Global Scholarship will automatically be reviewed for other scholarships for which they are eligible.

Arthur T. Vanderbilt Scholarships

The Committee on Graduate Admissions will award a limited number of merit-based, full-tuition Arthur T. Vanderbilt Scholarship scholarships.

Covering the cost of tuition for the full-time master's degree programs, the Vanderbilt Scholarship is awarded to a select group of extraordinarily talented LL.M. candidates who have demonstrated outstanding academic promise and/or achievement in their respective field(s) of interest.

Dean's Graduate Awards

The Committee offers merit-based awards in varying amounts to full-time master's students who have demonstrated significant academic promise and/or achievement in their respective fields.

Taxation Program Scholarships

Prospective students interested in being considered for the Tax Law Review, M. Carr Ferguson, Michael I. Saltzman, or Graduate Tax Program Scholarships are encouraged to apply to the full-time LL.M. in Taxation before the priority deadline of January 31, 2014. Decisions regarding all scholarships for the full-time Taxation program are released on a rolling basis, and follow notification of admission to the LL.M. degree.

Foreign-trained applicants to the LL.M. in International Taxation are considered for the Wallace Scholarship on the basis of their admissions application. Admitted students selected to receive this award will be notified at the time of admission.

Tax Law Review* Scholarships

Up to eight half-tuition scholarships are awarded annually to full-time LL.M. in Taxation candidates who serve as graduate editors of the faculty-edited Tax Law Review. These merit-based scholarships are awarded to those who have outstanding academic records and show exceptional promise for work in the Graduate Tax Program.

M. Carr Ferguson Scholarship

A half-tuition scholarship is awarded annually to one full-time candidate for the LL.M. in Taxation degree. Candidates for this scholarship should demonstrate academic excellence, engagement with the field, high potential to contribute to the Law School community, and/or interest in public service. The recipient of this scholarship will be expected to write a research paper of publishable quality under the guidance of a faculty member.

Michael I. Saltzman Scholarship

A partial-tuition scholarship is awarded annually to one full-time candidate for the LL.M. in Taxation degree. Candidates for this merit-based scholarship should demonstrate an interest in pursuing tax controversy or tax litigation practice.

Graduate Tax Program Scholarships

The Graduate Tax Program awards merit-based, partial-tuition scholarships to full-time LL.M. in Taxation candidates. These scholarships are awarded to applicants who have outstanding academic records and show exceptional promise for work in the Graduate Tax Program.

Gerald L. Wallace Fund Scholarships

Half-tuition scholarships based on merit are awarded to full-time candidates in the LL.M. in International Taxation program.
