

LL.M. THESIS CERTIFICATION FORM

LL.M. students have the option to write a substantial research paper, in conjunction with a seminar or directed research, which may be recorded as "thesis" on their transcript. At the onset of the seminar or directed research, the student must obtain approval from the professor that the paper will be completed for a "thesis" designation. It should be substantial in length (at least 10,000 words exclusive of footnotes) and, like an A paper for J.D. students, must be analytical rather than descriptive in nature, showing original thought and analysis.

Please note that the student will not receive additional credit for writing the thesis, but will only receive credit for the seminar or directed research for which he or she is registered.

TO THE STUDENT: Please complete this form and submit it with your final paper to your supervising professor by the deadline set for the submission of the paper.
