Martin Lipton '55 has been urging the adoption of a "New Paradigm" for Corporate Governance that derives from the recognition by corporations, their CEOs and boards of directors, and by leading institutional investors and asset managers, that short-termism and attacks by short-term financial activists significantly impede long-term economic prosperity. In essence, the New Paradigm recalibrates the relationship between public corporations and their major institutional investors and conceives of corporate governance as a collaboration among corporations, shareholders and other stakeholders working together to achieve long-term value and resist short-termism.

What does a "corporate governance" paradigm do? What role does it play in board governance? What role does it play politically? Do we need a new paradigm and, if so, is this it? How does it differ from current practice?

Please join us for a fascinating panel discussion. Mr. Lipton will present the elements of the New Paradigm, followed by commentary and discussion with a distinguished panel.

This event has been approved for two (2) credits of CLE in the Areas of Professional Practice category. Credits will be both transitional and non-transitional and the event is appropriate for both experienced and newly admitted attorneys.
